All American Jerr-Dan Wreckers and Carriers has announced the expansion of its commercial truck repair service to support towing companies, roadside assistance providers, transport businesses, and municipal fleet operators throughout Central New Jersey. The announcement follows continued development of the company's commercial truck operations at its Old Bridge location. All American Jerr-Dan Wreckers and Carriers operates as an authorized Jerr-Dan dealer in Old Bridge, New Jersey. In addition to commercial truck repair, the company conducts commercial tow truck sales and maintains departments for replacement parts, truck accessories, financing assistance, and mobile service.

Commercial towing vehicles operate under conditions that differ from passenger vehicles. Roadside assistance assignments, accident recovery, municipal towing, vehicle transport, and commercial hauling place repeated demands on braking systems, hydraulic components, carrier assemblies, lighting systems, electrical components, and other mechanical systems. As vehicles accumulate operating hours, scheduled maintenance and repair become part of normal fleet management activities.

According to the company, the expanded repair service was developed to accommodate maintenance and repair work for commercial tow trucks used throughout Central New Jersey. Repair appointments include inspections, diagnostics, preventative maintenance, hydraulic system repairs, electrical repairs, mechanical repairs, and maintenance procedures associated with commercial towing vehicles.

The repair department also services rollback carriers and wreckers operating on truck platforms commonly used throughout the towing industry, including Peterbilt, Freightliner, Hino, and Dodge Ram chassis. Replacement components used during repair procedures are supplied through the company's parts department when required for scheduled maintenance or repair work.

Commercial towing businesses frequently schedule maintenance throughout the operating life of their vehicles. Routine inspections may identify components requiring adjustment or replacement before additional repair work is performed. Mechanical repairs may also be scheduled following roadside recovery assignments, commercial transport operations, or routine vehicle inspections.

Mobile service remains part of the repair operation for qualifying maintenance and repair work. According to the company, certain repair procedures may be completed at customer locations when appropriate for the type of service requested.

"Commercial towing vehicles are used under operating conditions that require routine inspection and scheduled maintenance," said the owner of All American Jerr-Dan Wreckers and Carriers. "The expanded repair department includes inspections, diagnostics, preventative maintenance, repairs, and mobile service for commercial tow trucks, wreckers, and rollback carriers."

The repair department works alongside the company's replacement parts department during scheduled maintenance and repair procedures. Components used during repairs include parts associated with hydraulic systems, towing assemblies, lighting systems, carrier equipment, braking systems, suspension components, and other commercial vehicle systems.

Commercial truck repair is conducted at the company's Old Bridge location together with commercial tow truck sales, replacement parts, truck accessories, financing assistance, and mobile service. The company stated that these departments remain part of its commercial truck center serving businesses throughout Central New Jersey.

Transportation activity throughout Middlesex and Monmouth counties continues to involve roadside assistance providers, commercial towing businesses, municipalities, and transport operators. Tow trucks assigned to accident recovery, vehicle transport, roadside assistance, and municipal towing typically undergo scheduled maintenance throughout their operating life to address routine wear associated with commercial use.

According to All American Jerr-Dan Wreckers and Carriers, the expanded repair operation forms part of its commercial truck services available from the Old Bridge facility. The company stated that repair scheduling, inspections, preventative maintenance, diagnostics, and mobile service are available for commercial tow trucks, wreckers, rollback carriers, and related commercial vehicles.
